

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

POETRY: A Magazine of Verse

WAVES

One by one upon my shore
The little waves are laid,
Each one a new and perfect thing
Which the sea has made.

From that which is forever old
They come, forever young,
The latest, faintest echoes
Of the song the sea has sung.

They echo it in whispers.
I listen ceaselessly,
For fear the echoes die away
And I should hear the sea.

BEAUTY

Why did you stop me, God, that day,
Upon my rutted road of living?
Why might I not have kept my way
And never known your ruthless giving?

I should not walk so burdened now,
Nor be alone in this new land,
If all there is of beauty in the world
You had not pressed into my hand.

Louise Townsend Nicholl